SEEMS TO BE DYING.

The dispatches from Long Branch today give grave apprehensions regarding the President. There are so many complications connected with his case that his recovery appears to be an impossibility. Dr. Agnew is charged with saying that he did not believe the President would recover, and that his death was only a question of time. This turn of affairs in the condition of President Garfield will prove a severe blow to the country. The public was led to believe that his removal to Long Branch would bring about his complete recovery, and since that time as well as before, Dr. Bliss has expressed decided hopes that the President would get well. In the face of these facts to hear that he is on his dying bed, shocks the country terribly and is a bitter disappointment. He is so low and his blood has become so poisoned that the chances are against him.

The new sign at railway stations in Missouri, according to the Tribune, will read, "Look out for the James family when the train stops."

There were eight horrible murders in the East on Saturday, and three suicides, and one murder, and one suicide in the South.

The Democrats of Wisconsin are on a still hunt. They are so still that they don't want the public to get an idea that they are in earnest about nominating a ticket.

The executive committee of the Michigan fire relief commission in New York city, has already raised $33,000 for the sufferers in Michigan. James Gordon Bennett gave $1,000.

There is a good deal said about the "spoil system," by independent Republican papers. The "spoil system" which the Republican party has adopted and now engaged in carrying out is forever spoiling the Democratic chances of success.

When the Republicans meet in convention at Madison they should not forget Hiram Smith, a representative of the agricultural interests of the State. He is not only a successful farmer, but he is worthy of any place on the State ticket.

It is said that Senator Sawyer has presented his son with 250 square miles of land in the St. Croix valley, north of Hudson, in this State. The price paid by Mr. Sawyer was one dollar per acre. There are 160,000 acres in the tract, and most of it is fine land.

Sergeant Mason has written an address to the people of the United States. Probably it is an apology for not taking better aim when he shot at Guiton. Mason will be tried by court martial, and will likely be dismissed the service and imprisoned. He ought to be for throwing away such a splendid opportunity to do his country a good turn.

Roscoe Conkling took a hand in politics at Utica last week, and carried seven wards out of eleven. Of course it wasn't very dignified business for an ex-United States Senator, but he did it for pastime, and to show the boys that he hadn't lost his influence and hadn't forgotten how to fix things in a way which would make the crowd follow him. It is evident that Roscoe is not out of politics yet.

The Democrats hope to profit by the blunders the Republican State convention will make. One of the first duties of that convention should be to make no blunders. There should be enough honor and wisdom and political foresight in that convention to prevent any mistakes being made which would break the strength of the Republican party and result advantageously to the Democrats. The way to keep from blundering is for the Republican convention to retain its self-possession and insist upon a free and honest vote in that body. Under these circumstances the result will not be a blunder.

The October Atlantic Monthly is one of the best numbers recently issued. Rev. Phillips Brooks contributes an exceedingly interesting article on Dean Stanley, describing him as a scholar, writer, preacher, and the varied charm of his character as a man. Mr. Howells continues his exquisite story of Dr. Brown's Practice with two chapters which will be read with great interest by his host of admirers. Colonel Higginson writes with his usual charm of style in regard to Carlyle's "Laugh," a paper which will make many feel more kindly toward Carlyle than they may have felt after reading his "Reminiscences." Richard L. Dugdale writes of the "Origin of Crime in Society," an essay which will be found of no little interest by students of social science. Miss Phelps has a thoughtful essay with the rather startling title "Is God Good?" Richard Grant White writes of "The Two Hamlets," an article which cannot fail to attract the notice of Shakespeare readers. Henry James continues his "Portrait of a Lady," which steadily increases in interest, and is unquestionably destined to be the greatest novel he has yet written.

The war on passenger rates between Chicago and the chief cities of the East still continues and will very likely increase in bitterness during the next few weeks. Vanderbilt is waging what he considers a deadly war and is willing to sink hundreds of thousands rather than yield to other companies. The fare is now the same on all the principal roads between Chicago, New York, and Boston, and the only way the Pennsylvania Central can get the start of Vanderbilt is to run a lightning train from Chicago to New York—900 miles—in twenty-four hours. This can possibly be done over the Pittsburg & Fort Wayne and the Pennsylvania Central, but can hardly be accomplished by the New York Central, as the distance is against that road. Should the Pennsylvania road decide to make the time from Chicago to New York in twenty-four hours, it is said on good authority that Vanderbilt will reduce the fare from New York to Chicago to one dollar. When these gigantic corporations begin a war upon each other there is no room for either to retreat, the public look on with considerable amusement especially when they can do their railway traveling for almost nothing.

SLOWLY SINKING.

The President Falling—Death Coming Its Victim—Hope Dead in the Hearts of Many, and the End is at Hand.

LONG BRANCH, September 18.—The President is slowly sinking. He had another rigor this evening, which was, however, of shorter duration than the chill of yesterday forenoon. All that medical skill could do to prevent the recurrence of the rigor had been done, but without avail. Ever since the attack yesterday the physicians have been dreading its repetition. They have kept a very close watch upon the patient. Whenever there has been the slightest indication of a chill, the extremities were wrapped in hot flannels, and other precautionary measures used. Once or twice during the day the feet and hands of the President have grown cold.

But each time the doctors succeeded in working off the threatened chill. Tonight, however, their labors were unsuccessful. The second chill has not yet caused great alarm.

For several days past the minds of those around the President have been gradually prepared for the worst. New and dangerous developments cause pain, but not surprise. The appearance of favorable symptoms even are regarded with distrust lest they should precursor greater evils. To-night when the bad news was received from the sick room, people at the Elberon manifested none of the signs of great anxiety which such an alarming event would have caused three weeks ago.

The events of the day prior to the rigor had been of a more favorable character than those of yesterday. The patient was no better, but he suffered less. The condition of pulse and temperature showed how great was his prostration. He was too weak to rally from the effects of yesterday's rigor until nearly twenty-four hours had elapsed. At 11 o'clock this morning his temperature was 100, pulse 116, and respiration 29. These high figures, Dr. Boynton said, were the most encouraging features of the day. Last night the President rested as none but exhausted men do rest. His was not the sleep of healthy exhaustion though, but rather the repose of deadly prostration.

The cough was less frequent, and the respiration lower, but the discharge of pus from the lungs was unchanged. The pulse oscillated between 102 and 112. The temperature remained most of the time slightly below normal. General Swain, who watched at the bedside, said that it was one of the best nights the President had passed in many weeks. The physicians, however, did not agree with the General. The morning bulletin showed the temperature to be 98; pulse 102; respiration 18.

Before 9 o'clock quite a company of people had assembled at the Elberon. Whenever a physician would pass by he was closely questioned as to the latest developments of the case. Everybody expected another rigor, and the day wore on, it seemed as though every one would be disappointed. Dr. Hamilton said that the President was doing very well, despite his great weakness, and he had hoped that the day would be passed without serious difficulty. The doctor felt justified by the absence of unfavorable symptoms in going to New York in the afternoon.

Colonel Corbin, who had business in Washington, also left the Branch, being assured that he could do so with safety.

The contrast with the excitement of yesterday noon was marked. Secretaries Windom, Hunt, and Postmaster General James visited the Elberon before church, and sent to friends telegrams announcing the President's condition. Sitting on a shaded porch of the hotel were Attorneys General MacVeagh, George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, James and William Seligman, the New York bankers, George W. Philman, Mr. Hart of Philadelphia, and other cottagers discussing the common topic.

Colonel Corbin, who had business in Washington, also left the Branch, being assured that he could do so with safety.

ELBERON, Sept. 19, 10 a.m.—The condition of the President this morning continues unfavorable. Shortly after the issue of the evening bulletin, he had a chill lasting fifteen minutes, the febrile rise following, continued until 12 o'clock midnight, during which time his pulse ranged from 112 to 130, the sweating that followed was quite profuse. The cough which was troublesome during the chill gave him but little annoyance the remainder of the night. This morning at 8 a.m., his temperature was 98.8; pulse 106 and feeble; respiration 22. At 8:30 a.m., another chill came on, on account of which, dressing was temporarily postponed. A bulletin will be issued at 12:30 p.m.

(Signed)

D. W. BLISS,
F. H. HAMILTON.

LONG BRANCH, September 19.—The attendants early reported that the President had had a comfortable night.

9 a.m.—Official—His condition continues unfavorable; had a fifteen minute chill last night; pulse up to midnight, 112 to 130; profuse sweating, but cough less troublesome.

At 8:30 a.m. he had another chill, causing the postponement of dressing.

Boynton said, "The President is very low and exhausted."

Agnew said, "I believe the President will not recover. It is only a question of time. It may be a few days."

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 19.—Dr. Bliss says this morning's chill was the worst the President ever had; it was followed by vomiting, high fever, and sweating.

12 m.—Pulse 118, temperature 98, respiration 20. Agnew says the President will probably have another chill this evening.

3 p.m.—The President is sleeping.

PRAYERS FOR GARFIELD.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 18.—The following cable dispatch has been received to-day.

DUBLIN, Sept. 18.—To Mrs. Garfield, Long Branch: The delegates assembled in National convention of Ireland charge me to convey to you their deep sympathy and their hope that the life of the President may be spared to you and his country.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Prayers were offered for the recovery of President Garfield in several metropolitans' chapels.

me concerned. It is believed, however, that there will be some new developments to-day in regard to local rates. There is no sign of any cessation of hostilities. The only change noted at is that the Pennsylvania company will put on some fast trains between Chicago and St. Louis and Philadelphia and New York, that will make the trip between here and New York in twenty-four hours.

At Toledo the Lake Shore road has made a new cut by selling tickets from Toledo to New York for $4, and to Boston for $5.

OLD SOLDIERS.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Sept. 18.—All is bustle in this city to arrange for the soldiers' reunion which is to meet here on the 21st inst., and continue three days. It is expected that a large delegation of veterans will be on hand. Ex-President Hayes has positively promised to be present, and has accepted the invitation of E. H. Waldron, of the Lake Erie & Western railroad, to be his guest. Mr. Waldron will send his private car to Fremont after the ex-President. This is the same car in which President Garfield rode to Washington.

But each time the doctors succeeded in working off the threatened chill. Tonight, however, their labors were unsuccessful.

The second chill has not yet caused great alarm.

For several days past the minds of those around the President have been gradually prepared for the worst. New and dangerous developments cause pain, but not surprise.

The appearance of favorable symptoms even are regarded with distrust lest they should precursor greater evils.

To-night when the bad news was received from the sick room, people at the Elberon manifested none of the signs of great anxiety which such an alarming event would have caused three weeks ago.

Hospitality.

There is a great deal of mourning in certain quarters over the decay of what is called "old-fashioned hospitality." It must be remembered that things in general have changed very materially during the last one or two generations. In former days people lived in a much more isolated way than they do now, the facilities for getting from place to place were restricted, the daily newspaper was not brought to the door of every one's house, and the arrival of a stranger in the village was a noticeable event. In those times the visit of a friend from a distance was hailed with delight, bringing, as he was supposed to do, a new fund of information to be talked over; new ideas to be discussed, the freshest gossip from abroad, and possibly the latest fashion from the metropolis. He could not come by a train in the morning and depart by another in the evening; when he came to stay for a journey, than was a somewhat formidable affair, and nobody wanted him to leave in a hurry.

There was more leisure time to be given to visiting than there is now; men and women were not so much in a hurry themselves, were conducted with more deliberation; there were fewer letters to write, more books to read, and fewer amusements to fill up the vacant hour. The entertainment of guests was not as expensive as it is in these days; persons in moderate circumstances were not expected to make any special change in their mode of living because they had company, and everything went off the usual fashion. And so the villagers, when they felt as if they would like a change, would pack up a bundle of clean clothes, harness old Dobbin in the wagon, and drive off to make a visit, which might last for days or weeks, according to circumstances. In mid-winter, the country people would take the public sleigh and go down to see their city friends, emboldened to this by the certainty of having their city friends return the visit, with interest, when mid-summer should come. The parish minister never thought of going to the tavern, but deposited himself and his well-worn valise, and possibly some trinkets of the younger sons of the family, in the domicile of his brother parson, with as little consciousness of intrusion as it would be expected to pay full board for the whole concern, as long as it might be convenient for them to remain.

I do not mean to say that this broad hospitality was never abused; guests would sometimes take undue advantage of the kindness of their entertainers and drop down at the wrong time and wear out their welcome, and it might be, make themselves offensive by their exacting and criticism and excessive freedom. Persons of an economical turn of mind might impose their company upon acquaintances, who could not afford to furnish provender for their beasts nor food for their ravenous children; and if these intrusive visitors happened to be particularly dull and stupid, as well as greedy and grasping, it required a great amount of Christian virtue to "use hospitality without grudging." I well remember how, in my boyhood, we always shuddered when we saw certain familiar old vehicles stop at the door and deposit their weary load of dusty and hungry visitors—so we knew that "they came to stay," and what this meant we also knew by frequent and sad experience. When you are tolerably certain that your uninvited guests are simply making a convenience of your establishment, and come there instead of going to a hotel, merely to save expense, and then do nothing to make themselves agreeable, it is not easy to treat them with civility. To have a visitor of this sort planted down before your eyes, morning, noon and night—bearing everything that is said, and seeing everything that is going on—perhaps interrupting you every few minutes with some insignificant remark, when you are trying to read your evening paper—commenting upon the furniture and suggesting this or that. Erewhile improvement, a la belle époque, and a bit of red to break up the monotony of color there—complaining of the "general want of tone" in your favorite picture; then, after a little pause, and just when you are absorbed in some interesting article, breaking in with the inquiry, "whether it is your general custom to allow your dog to enter the parlor?"—or, still worse, proposing to read to the family circle a speech delivered by Esq. Langstaff at the last town-meeting at Boreville on "the expediency of opening a new road to Contrablast," and which, "he can assure you, put an effectual stoppage upon any further movement in that direction"—O, how you wish that an effectual estoppel might arrest the movement of his weary tongue, and that something might happen to call him back speedily to Boreville.

We are not to infer, because of the change of custom that we have noticed, that true hospitality has ceased to exist. Good people are as glad to see their friends as they ever were; and there is scarcely a house, in the city or country, that has not one extra room for visitors. There are a few obvious rules, which, if they were universally observed, would greatly enhance the comfort and pleasure of both host and guest.

Every visitor is bound to do his best to make himself agreeable. If he chances to know or suspect that there is a skeleton somewhere about the premises, something which it is desired to keep out of sight, he should be careful to make no allusion to the fact. It is not expedient for him to make an effort to induce his entertainer to confide the family secret to him; when his advice and sympathy are called for, it will be time enough for him to speak. Not only should he abstain from all matters which are positively disagreeable, but he should try to make himself positively agreeable, so that the sun may shine all the brighter upon the household because of his being there. He need not be talking all the time, nor other people may be fond of the sound of their own voices, which is of his own; but, on the other hand, he ought not to be a dumb guest; for such a visitor is a very heavy load to carry. And again, as long as he remains in the house, let him be careful to comply with the regular usages of the family, and not annoy them by late hours in the morning or late hours at night, or by uncertainty of appearance at dinner-time. When he has reason to think that his visit has been protracted long enough, let him take up his luggage and depart; and if he is not asked to renew it, let him understand that his friends have had all they want of him, and wait till he hears from his friends before he intrudes upon them again.

There are also certain things which the host will do well to remember. He should not overwhelm his guest with excessive attentions, trying to find occupation for all his vacant hours, insisting upon taking him round to see the sights, which, perhaps, he cares nothing about, never leaving him to himself, inviting a host of people to call upon him when he is longing for rest, and telling him every half-hour that "you hope he will make himself entirely at home." Neither should you give him occasion to see that you are in any way "putting yourself out" for his benefit, or that you are worried about his meat or drink, or "afraid that his bed does not quite suit him," or by apologizing for anything about the household. Neither is it quite fair, either for yourself or for him, to urge him to stay when this world not suit the convenience of either party, when he has made up his mind to go, let him go with your blessing.

True friendship's laws are by this rule expressed. Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest. —Bishop Clark, in N. Y. Ledger.

How to Bathe.

The mere fact of immersing the body in water, whether salt or fresh, has no magic power for good. As a matter of physical experience, bathing causes loss of bodily heat, which is rarely if ever desirable. People generally make great mistakes as to the use of baths and bathing. It seldom happens that an ordinary bath cleanses the skin, which should be the primary purpose. For the rest, no possible good can be done by merely burying the surface of the body in water. As to the idea that the salt of the sea acts on the skin, that is a flimsy notion, resting on very insufficient premises; and if it were true, a sponging with salt-water would be better than bathing in the sea. The truth is, the value of a bath is in proportion to its effect as an agent producing reaction. There may be cases in which the abstraction of heat by bathing in cold water would do good. We know there are such cases, but they are not, as a rule, to be found among the multitudes who bathe. For the purpose of lowering the temperature of the body, cold bathing must be used under medical direction, and it is improbable that a practitioner, desiring to employ this remedy would order his patient to "bathe" in the ordinary sense of the term. It may therefore be repeated that the use of bathing is to produce reaction, and act as a stimulant to the circulation, especially at the surface of the body and in the skin. This should be borne in mind, and it will be at once perceived that there is nothing but evil in prolonging the bath beyond a very brief duration. As soon as the surface is cooled, the bather should quit the water, and rub the skin briskly with a rough towel, bring back the blood, and produce the redness and the glow of health. The actual length of time which a bather may remain in the water should be determined by the exercise he is able to take while in it. If he can throw his muscular system into vigorous action, so as to maintain his heat, the exercise will do him good, and in a few minutes he may secure as good a constitutional as he could get by a brisk walk, or a gallop, or a game of cricket; but unless he can thus work to make heat, he is simply throwing away heat, which he may not readily replace, every moment he remains in the bath. Many weakly but fairly healthy persons do themselves great harm by bathing frequently, and under the mistaken impression that remaining in the water is in itself healthful. This idea should be cast aside as erroneous and misleading. The only safe rule for the ordinary bather is to regard the bath as a means of promoting the circulation of his blood. If he finds that when he comes out of the water he is warmer than when he went in, he is benefited. If he is colder, the bath has done him no good. It may not perchance have done him any serious harm, but it has certainly done no good, and a risk has been run by taking it, while the loss of heat entailed has been a waste of power. This power may be replaced; but if it is, there will need to be an expenditure of strength in some subsequent exercise which had better have been turned to profitable account on land, instead of being simply devoted to the repair of an injury inflicted in the pursuit of health.—Harper's Weekly.

Improved Ideas of Quality in the Draft Horse.

In one thing there has been a very marked change in the popular idea of the draft horse for use in this country. A few years ago great size was considered the one thing needful in a draft horse. They were not exactly bought and sold by the pound, like cattle or swine, but the weight of the horse was one of the first questions asked; quality was lost sight of. This rage for size led to the importation of many miserable brutes, and to the perpetuation of many glaring defects in conformation, and to the transmission of much hereditary unsoundness. But, thanks to the judgment of discriminating buyers, the public have come to understand that it takes something besides flesh and bone to make a good horse. Quality, action, endurance, and temperament are now closely scrutinized by all breeders of intelligence, as well as by the buyers of horses for the great markets; and the importer or breeder who now neglects these essentials in his selections must go into some other business.

We are not to infer, because of the change of custom that we have noticed, that true hospitality has ceased to exist. Good people are as glad to see their friends as they ever were; and there is scarcely a house, in the city or country, that has not one extra room for visitors. There are a few obvious rules, which, if they were universally observed, would greatly enhance the comfort and pleasure of both host and guest.

A Cure for Smokers.

"A few years ago I was a most inveterate smoker," said Judge Tyner, the First Assistant Postmaster-General, as he strolled along the beach at Atlantic City. "At that time I thought it nothing to get through ten cigars a day, and often I exceeded that number. The practice played the mischief with my health, but, do what I could, the habit stuck to me, and I decided that it was no good trying to be virtuous where tobacco was concerned.

"Well, I cured myself by a mere accident. One day, while crossing the ocean, I had a severe spell of sea-sickness. I went up on deck in the hope that the fresh air would act as a reviver. Mechanically, as was my habit, I took out a cigar and lit it. Before it was half consumed the sickness came on again. Ugh! it makes me pale to think of it even now. Anyhow, overboard went the cigar, and from that day to this a couple of whiffs are enough to turn me upside down. If you happen to know anybody who wants to let up on the habit, just advise him to take a walk and a dose of sea-sickness together, and I warrant you he will be an antiseptic man ever afterward."

BRIEFLETS.

—Mrs. Hand, mother of W. A. Hand, of this city, died at her home in Beloit, Saturday last.

—One week from to-night Rev. Dr. Thomas is to tell Janesville folk about "Social Forces."

The dog poisoner was abroad last night, and this morning two corpses were found lying on West Milwaukee street.

The Acme Humpty Dumpty Company passed through the city this morning en route for Beloit where they play to-night.

W. H. Parker yesterday lost his little child aged about fifteen months. The funeral is to be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

—See the advertisement of H. Heyn, 103 Wisconsin street, Milwaukee, and when visiting the exposition see his display of lace goods.

A nine year old son of Mr. Albert Gramka, of the Second ward, fell into a barrel of water yesterday, and came near drowning, but was rescued by his mother.

William Drift made a good record threshing for J. F. Gleason, of La Prairie, one week ago to-day. In ten hours he threshed out 1,215 bushels of barley.

Messrs. Britton & Kimball who had an elegant display of furniture at the fair, and who carried off the premiums, generously donate the premium to the society. It others would be as generous, the Rock county agricultural society would financially, come out all right.

E. H. Bennett sold to R. M. Bostwick the store on Main street lately occupied by Hanchett & Sheldon. Mr. Bennett has been the owner of this property for many years, and the consideration received by him is said to be in the neighborhood of $7,000.

Warren Barnes, who has for years been the agent of the Milwaukee & St. Paul railway at Brothell, died at his home in that place about 6 o'clock this morning. He was a man who held the respect of all, and his death will be mourned by the entire community.

The committee reported the following delegates as entitled to seats in the convention, the report being adopted:

First ward—J. W. Sale, E. G. Field, J. L. Ford, Silas Hayner, S. Trulson.

Second ward—Jesse Miles, Paul Young, W. T. Vankirk, I. C. Brownell.

Third ward—B. Hilt, W. Hatch, S. Holl dredge, J. F. Kimball.

Fourth ward—F. S. Eldred, A. McDonald, M. M. Phelps, C. M. Riker, M. M. Conant.

Fifth ward—J. B. Carle, J. B. Hume, Jamesville town—Z. P. Burdick, G. R. Barker.

Rock—Charles Noyes.

Mr. Sale moved that the convention proceed to elect two delegates to the State convention.

Capt. Miles moved that the delegates be elected by acclamation. Carried.

On motion of John B. Carle, Mr. Sale was elected a delegate to the State convention by acclamation.

On motion of Jesse Miles, Mr. S. J. M. Putnam was also elected a delegate to the State convention.

The convention then adjourned.

It is simply marvelous how quickly constipation, biliousness, sick headache, fever and ague, and malaria, are cured by "Sellers' Liver Pills."

CHEAP ENOUGH.

It is getting cheaper to travel than to stay at home, and while the trunk lines in Chicago are slashing and stabbing, the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee railway does not propose to stand still, but is taking a hand in the fun. It has placed its rates to the East from Milwaukee close down, the tickets to New York being only $5; to Buffalo, $5, and to Boston, $6. The diagram of sleepers can be soon and tickets secured at the company's Milwaukee office, and those who have time to travel can secure no more pleasant or economical route than this. Every accommodation for comfort and facility for speed and safety is provided the patrons of this line, and a better opportunity of visiting the east was never presented.

Many lose their beauty from the hair falling or fading. Parker's Hair Balsam supplies necessary nourishment, prevents falling and grayness, and is an elegant dressing.

WORTHLESS STUFF.

Not so fast, my friend; if you could see the strong, healthy, blooming men, women and children that have been raised from beds of sickness, suffering and almost death, by the use of Hop Bitters. You would say "Glorious and invaluable remedy." See another column.

that too, upon her merits, for she seems as assuming and modest as though the stage could never be familiar to her."

The Sentinel of the same place says: "Miss Guernsey is an excellent dramatic reader, and showed great power of delineation, assuming in quick succession the various characters in the scenes she recites, from 'Topsy,' in Uncle Tom's Cabin, to Margarette in Faust. Her performance was perhaps the sensation of the evening. If she is inclined to the stage she may easily find an engagement."

ROCK'S REPUBLICANS.

The Delegates Chosen to Represent Them in the State Convention at Madison.

The Republican Senatorial convention met this afternoon in accordance with the call to elect two delegates to the State convention.

Hon. John H. Bennett called the convention to order, and read the call.

On motion Hon. David F. Sayre, of Porter, was elected chairman, and C. F. Dickey, of Spring Valley, Secretary.

On motion the chairman appointed as committee on credentials, Dr. Smith, of Evansville, Pliny Norcross, Janesville, and C. Ingersoll, Beloit, whose report was adopted.

B. F. Duvaldick, of Janesville, John Conley, of Clinton, and F. C. Buten, of Milton, were appointed tellers, and on motion of Dr. Smith an informal ballot was taken for one delegate, which resulted:

Whole
